

New Loyola Night At Alcazar RETREAT BEGINS MONDAY

GLEE CLUB, THESPIANS SET FOR LOYOLA NIGHT

Annual Social Function, Thursday, November 27, to include Two One-act Plays, Songs by Glee Club and Featured Vocalists; Greene's Band to Play for Dancing.

On Thursday, November 27th, the seventh annual Loyola Night takes place at the Alcazar, beginning at 8:30.

Loyola Night has grown from lusty infancy, increasing and waxing, season after season, until it has assumed the position of patriarch in the college's family of social functions.

Always good, Loyola Night, with added experience and reputation annually improves, and this year's program is by far the best.

Prize Drawing

Father Jacobs, chief entrepreneur of Loyola, will give ten dollars, (receipt on presentation), as a floor prize, to be presented to the lucky liberal arts student, or one of his friends, at the magic stroke of midnight. The ticket stub at the door assures all of an equal chance in the drawing.

Plays Presented

Loyola's Dramatic Society, under the tutelage of Professor John Henry Lawton, A.B., B.L.I., M.A., after profound research and assiduous practice, will present two one-act plays, "The Wedding" by Kirkpatrick, "In the Zone" by O'Neill. No praise is necessary for the Evergreen Thespians, the "Old Guard" shock troops for any social engagement.

Soloists Featured

As an essential element in the nature of entertainment, the "Glee Club" will render its group selections, endeavored to give a maximum of pleasure to fortunate guests. Bill Plummer, senior baritone, will share solo honors with Bill Wiegand, freshman tenor.

On the conclusion of the formal presentations, Michael Greene's orchestra will play that good dance music until the morning hour.

First Lady Greets Youth Meeting

Frank Horka Represents Loyola At White House.

Representatives of some forty national youth organizations met in Washington on Thursday, October 23, at the invitation of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. Frank E. Horka, Loyola Junior and President of the N.F.F.C.S., represented that organization at the convention. The purpose of the meeting was to acquaint American Youth with the duties they will fulfill in the program of civilian defense. Mrs. Roosevelt presided at the meeting and briefly explained the function and purpose of the Office of Civilian Defense. After a short discussion, the various representatives had tea at the White House.

Gibbs Presents Inspiring Talk

Paints Graphic Pictures Of Britain's Struggle.

Drawing a graphic word-picture of an embattled, but courageous nation, Sir Philip Gibbs, eminent British author, journalist, and playwright, held the interest of a well-filled Lyric Theatre for two hours last Sunday evening. Sir Philip gave a brilliant account in his lecture, "The Spirit of Britain," of how his fellow countrymen are bearing up under the terrific stress of daily air bombardments and meager food rations. There was, however, no plea for aid from the lecturer, but merely a straight forward account of Englishmen at war.

Cites Heroic Acts

In his general narrative of England at war, Sir Philip cited many incidents of heroism on the part of individuals, civilians as well as men of the army and navy. He showed by these examples that

Fall Lecture Series Considers Various Social Topics

Rev. John P. Delaney Founder
Of Social Order Institute,
To Deliver Talks.

FIRST LECTURE ON NOV. 16th

To Deal With Democracies' Duty In Labor Relations.

This year, the annual series of Fall lectures will be delivered in the Loyola library by the Rev. John P. Delaney, S.J., M.A., Ph.D., Mag. Agg. (Gregorian University), S.T.L., on "The Ideal Political State". His opening talk, which will begin at four o'clock, on Sunday, Nov. 16th, will be the first of a series of four to be given by this distinguished Jesuit, who is the founder and director of The Institute of Social Order.

Fr. Delaney Well Qualified

Fr. Delaney's Institute directs all schools that deal with any factors of social order. It teaches the laboring class what constitutes social order, and tries to bring about understanding between capital and labor. It was established by Fr. Delaney some two years ago, and now it publishes each month a Service Bulletin, in which labor

Senior Barn Dance Social Success

Large Crowd Enjoys Rustic Atmosphere In Gym.

As the dulcet tones of the second-sweetest trumpet north of Pratt Street floated out upon the foggy Halloween air, the Class of '42 held the second annual Senior Barn Dance at Loyola. For the occasion the College Gym was transformed into an autumnal barn-yard, complete with rail-fence, hay, corn, corn, and corn. Over two hundred couples were in attendance, and staid classicists, eremitic scientists and dyspeptic accountants donned checkered shirts and overalls, inserted a wisp of straw between their teeth and, in general, let down their hair to join in the revelry.

Winegar Warbles

The music, quite adequate for the occasion, was furnished by Lew Lertz' Orchestra, temporarily under the baton of Frank Ayd, Student President. Miss Juanita Winegar was the featured vocalist and competently rendered a number of songs to the edification of all present. All these elements, working in perfect harmony, made the venture a complete success.

WIDELY KNOWN JESUIT TO CONDUCT RETREAT

Father Daniel A. Lord, S.J., to Preside over Upperclass
Conferences; Father North Will Talk to Freshmen;
Special Lectures Planned for Non-Catholics.

Monday, November 17, will find the entire Catholic student body of the college engaged in the opening exercises of the annual retreat. As is customary, the celebration of Mass will begin the activities on each of the three days.

After the Mass each morning the students will be divided into two groups. The freshmen will go to the chapel, where their conferences will be conducted by the Rev. Arthur A. North, S.J., Student Counselor. The upperclassmen will remain in the college library, where the Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S.J., will preside over their conferences.

Fr. Lord Nationally Known

Father Lord is a nationally known clergyman, principally because of the vigorous interest he has shown in the young people of America. He was born in Chicago, Ill., on April 23, 1888, and first became connected with a Jesuit institution when he entered Loyola University of Chicago, where he obtained his A.B. Continuing his studies, he received his M.A. at St. Louis University and then went on to Creighton University.

Father Lord entered the Society of Jesus in 1909, being ordained in 1923. Since then he has spent much of his time at St. Louis University, where he is now stationed. In 1925 the editorship of the Queen's Work was added to his many duties. Also in that same year he became National Organizer of the Sodality of Our Lady.

Is Noted Pamphleteer

In 1931 he undertook the organization and direction of the Summer School of Catholic Action. Father Lord is most widely known for his hundreds of pamphlets on moral topics, and will be remembered at Loyola from his visit here last March.

Hierarchy At Armory Mass

Sulpicians Celebrate 300th Year As Prelates Gather.

During the past week Baltimore was host to the largest assemblage of the Hierarchy in the history of the Catholic Church in America. The occasion was the tercentennial celebration of the founding of the Society of the Priests of St. Sulpice, or, as they are more popularly known, the Sulpicians. This year, 1941, also marks the sesqui-centennial of the landing of the Sulpicians in this country, and the 150th anniversary of the founding of St. Mary's Seminary.

Apostolic Delegate Opens Celebrations

The commemoration of these events began Monday morning at St. Mary's Seminary, Roland Park, with His Excellency, the Most Reverend Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, pontificating. The

Sodalists Form New Committees

Members Recite Rosary Daily In Chapel.

The Loyola Sodality has shown an enthusiastic spirit in carrying out its adopted project for November. Two sodalists volunteer each day to recite the Rosary before the Blessed Sacrament in the College Chapel.

These Rosaries are offered for the Souls in Purgatory, so that by the end of the month the boys feel that they will have done no little good. This represents but one phase of the spiritual activity proposed by the new Prefect, Joe Ryahl, and adopted by the members of the Sodality.

Scandinavian Safety Lies In Union

If the Nazi machine ever blows a fuse and things get settled in Europe, there may spring up a system of alliances such as never before existed. Smaller nations, realizing the futility of trying to defend themselves against mighty military colossi, will probably federate for common defense.

Partly because they became soft from prolonged peace, and partly because of certain incompatibilities between them, the northern European countries couldn't stir themselves to prepare for war when they had a chance several years ago. After all, they did side-step entrance into World War I. But, wiser from her misfortunes during this war, Scandinavia will probably never again look askance at union.

Today all Scandinavia bitterly hates Hitler and fearfully dreads vassalage under a Nazi overlord. For centuries they have been democratic; they have always hated tyranny, abhorred totalitarian political philosophy. Today they are one in hatred. And as soon as the first soldier of liberation tramps through their fields they will rise as one man.

Finland was in a serious dilemma. She was torn between her innate hatred of the Russians and an aversion for the Nazi order. As if this problem weren't perplexing enough, Mr. Hull made demands on Finland which couldn't be ignored. For the U. S. and Great Britain may one day have a hand in the fixation of the Russo-Finnish border and the Finns realized that, but for the British and American influence, Russia would claim on the day of reckoning the 1914 frontiers of the Romanovs. Helsinki was likewise aware that compliance with American demands would provoke Hitler. One German spokesman said, "No words are sharp enough to characterize Washington's ghetto methods whereby the government, with gangsters at its head, in Jewish shamelessness and with pitiful dilatoriness tries to tell the Finnish people what to do." But Finland had to make a decision; she could hedge no longer. Finland made her decision and she realizes that unless the allies are victorious, she will become a German vassal state suffering a worse fate than Norway's.

Sweden's problem is how to keep out of the war. She has thus far been able to retain her neutrality only by some sort of a miracle. Since she has been able to avoid the conflict this long, however, her chances of remaining neutral seem much better now than at any time since the beginning of the war. For Germany is too busy on the Eastern front to risk war on another front. Moreover, the liquidation of the Finnish front reduced the usefulness of Sweden's territory to the Germans.

Swedish Premier Hansson officially has a kind word for all peoples. But off the record the Swedes hate the Russians and the Nazis, they admire the Norwegians and they would help the Finns.

Norway's plight is sad. Every man, woman and child stubbornly opposes Vidkun Quisling's regime; every Norwegian defies the army of occupation and a small but ruthless group of traitors.

The Norwegians and the Swedes and the Finns know what a German victory would mean for them. They know that for all their racial purity, they would be enslaved like other "inferior races".

Cold Spring Murmurings

By JOHN V. K. HELFRICH, '42

The fraternity of humor columnists, in which your humble correspondent is classified as fourth-rate, thirteenth class, 4-F, D.D.T., welcomes a new member to our homey little group of assorted maniac-depressives. The newcomer, H. Allen Wolfgang Smith, who made his reputation as author of last spring's best-seller, Low Man On A Totem Pole, is indeed a valuable addition. His keenness of perception can be seen by the following statement, which was made on completion of his first week's trick as columnist of United Feature syndicate.

Mr. Smith said: "Just between you and me it's tough. A typewriter can be a pretty formidable contraption when you sit down in front of it and say, 'All right, now I'm going to be funny'."

Well, I guess we all feel that way when we start out. But just wait, H. Allen Wolfgang Smith, until you get where you can't look a keyboard full in the face without screaming.

SOUR NOTE

The Senior Class, it is reported, made a neat profit on its Barn Dance. This is definitely something new in dances thrown for the benefit of the Year Book. Year after year, these have been characterized by the usual charity of a GREYHOUND headline as "Senior Dance Social Success, Financial Failure." This year's dance reversed the formula completely. Class Treasurer Joe Reahl and his associated shylocks did a remarkable job with the shekels, but unfortunately the Decoration Committee ran into ignition trouble (it says here) north of Cockeysville, and there was a shortage of corn. . . for ornamental purposes. The Orchestra Committee more than made up this deficiency. The band, masquerading under the name of a former Loyola student, Pvt. Lewis V. Lortz, U.S.A., who played with them one night last fall in payment of an election bet, acted suspiciously from the moment they came on the campus. A crow cawed from the distant woods. In the batting of an eyelash, the band disappeared.

Fifteen minutes later, the ocarina player peered out from under a rhododendron bush and gave the "all-clear" signal.

SPORTING NOTE

Strangers have quite a time understanding the ways of the cafe. They never learn why a nickel deposit on the bottle is required. But their greatest concern is how to get out when the Health Department raids the joint. When told that the Department never bothers the Kaff, they remark that—that's the trouble with this town—too much political favoritism.

One of these unfortunate fellows wandered into the Kaff last Friday and ordered a portion of the clam chowder. He was disgruntled at the fact that the shaving mug, which was placed before him, was only half full of chowder, but said nothing. Then something spongy and fuzzy passed his epiglottis. He looked into the chowder and fished up a "clam." He turned to Earl.

"Say, bud, look here. There's a piece of tennis ball here. An' here's another. It's still got the trade-mark on it. Look, Dunlop!"

"Well, sir! What of it?" asked Earl in a voice as cool as one of his frankfurters.

The customer was taken back by the proprietor's independence. He looked around the Kaff. What a tough bunch behind that counter. He wished he was out of the dive.

"What about it?" Earl challenged the sucker again, "What if there is a Dunlop tennis ball in the chowder?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all, sir," he said in an apologetic tone, "I-I merely prefer Wright and Ditson."

MASH NOTE

One of the worst pests in collegiate circles is the guy who is always saying, "I'll fix it up for you," when, as it must to all masculine conversations, the topic of discussion turns to the female of the species. The "fixer" knows everything that ever smeared lipstick on. Not only does he know her, he went to grammar school with her, and one word from him and she'd go out with Gargantua's little brother. But let him try to get you a date with any one of these for any specified night. You'll find that she's going to a Bingo Party with that kid brother of Gargantua that night.

The fixer is then put in a position of redeeming himself, so he tells you about a girl who has Dietrich's legs, Madeleine Carroll's hair, Ginger Rogers' looks and Lana Turner's sweater. He can really fix you up with this on a "blind date."

Well, brother, if you fall for this you're in for a surprise. But, after all, you got yourself into it. Be nonchalant. Pick up her false teeth with a flourish when she loses them in the Conga line. And, above all, don't look sheepish when you go to check her dark glasses and tin cup.

MORE ON THE WAR

Like it or no, America is at war today. Something like half of all the war materials we produce are being sent to England. A sizeable portion of our navy is fighting now to keep the sea lanes to England clear. Already several of our fighting ships have been sunk; more than a hundred of our seamen have been killed. Quite a few of our public figures and even some few of the common citizenry try to retreat from the ugly fact of the matter in pleasant euphemies anent "when we get into the war" and "if we should enter the war." But in the main Americans realize by now, that whether for good or ill, this nation is involved right up to the hilt in what our president calls a shooting war.

After this one point is passed, to wit, we are at war, popular accord on the question pretty well dissolves. This country today, for all the administration spilling about nation wide unity in a common faith, is split wide open on the issue, "Why are we at war?"

The isolationists tend to pass quietly over the iniquities of one A. Hitler and to lay all the blame to either the Jews, the munitions makers, the Anglophiles or all three together.

The party in power makes Hitler the first cousin of Beelzebub, calls England the last outpost of democracy and the British navy our first line of defense.

Both these answers, the isolationist's and the interventionist's, have in them the germ of truth. Both are, taken at their face value, so much prattle.

After the persecution of the German Jews, there are naturally many Jews in this country who would like to see Hitler's Germany destroyed. There are, of course, a few munitions magnates who will profit by this war and a few of our duly appointed statesmen are, it is true, for the English for no other reason save that they are the English. But neither any one of them alone nor all of them combined is any more to be blamed for this war than the Rosierucians. So much for the isolationists. They are not too important. They are in the minority and the opposition party is gradually contriving to keep them off the major networks and out of the larger publications. The interventionists again, are a different matter.

At the moment the ruling dynasty's various avowed aims, to keep the world fit for free peoples, to give all-out aid to Britain, to maintain the freedom of the seas; all are lumped together under the term, (does this sound familiar to you?) the preservation of our democratic way of life.

We do believe in democracy. Most of us too believe that even the travesty on democracy under which we are ruled today, is considerably better than what Germany offers as Socialism or Russia as Communism. We see too that by sustaining a little longer the shadow that is England, we are gaining so much the more time to get ourselves ready for the inevitable clash with Germany. What we do not see is where it is part of the democratic process to cloud the issue over with all this noise about the fusion of the spirits in the hour of stress of England and America.

What means all this piffle? Whence came it? We respect the British for the stubborn, valiant people that they are. Why now do our leaders try to make of them what they never were and never will be? What is behind it all? Whatever it is, of this one thing we are sure; we don't like it.

Alumni Head Plans New Improvements

Belter Known Loyola Is Aim; Plans Services Of A Paid Secretary.

Hugh Allen Meade, the new president of the Loyola College Alumni Association, is the present Assistant Attorney-General of Maryland. He was born on April 4, 1907, in Netcong, New Jersey. In 1923, he came to Baltimore and attended Loyola High School and Loyola College. After graduating from Loyola College in 1929 with an A.B. degree, Mr. Meade studied law at the University of Maryland.

In 1934, only two years after he had won his law degree, the youthful Mr. Meade was elected a member of the Maryland Legislature. Two years later, he resigned his position in the House of Delegates to become Supervisor of Assessments for Baltimore. He was setting a speedy pace in his path to success. Although he was enjoying a successful law practice, Hugh A. Meade was appointed Asst. Attorney-General in 1939.

Governor Ritchie's Aide

"One of the finest memories of my life," Mr. Meade pleasantly recalled, "was my close association with the late Governor Ritchie. Mr. Meade was the secretary of Governor Ritchie's primary campaign in 1934.

Though interested in politics and even though he is a member of the executive committee of the Young Democratic Clubs of Maryland, the Alumni President has always been known to be an independent Democrat—a member of no political machine.

No one can help but be impressed with Mr. Meade's most cooperative and winning manner. He is a pleasant conversationalist; and his sturdy 6' 2" frame adds to the picture of his strong individuality.

For A Better Known Loyola

Hugh A. Meade was elected president by the members of the Alumni Association in October for a term of one year. As he puffed on one of his fifteen daily cigars, he said: "The Alumni Association is attempting to keep step with the greater revised Loyola in all its activities. Our main aim is to cooperate with both the student and the Alumni in making Loyola better known."

The new president is directing his principal effort this year to a two-fold objective: First, to obtain the services of a full-time, paid, Alumni Secretary; Secondly, to the publication of an Alumni directory in which the name, occupation, and personal notes of each Alumnus will be given.

FALL QUARTERLY TO APPEAR SOON

Student Body Cooperation Urged For Coming Winter Edition Of Quarterly.

Within the next two weeks, the fall issue of The Evergreen Quarterly will make its appearance. Replete, as usual, with essays, short stories, poems and sundry other contributions, this issue bids fair to surpass the initial issues of last year.

While the student body has cooperated fairly well in the preparation of this number, it is felt that many more contributions should be forthcoming. The Staff looks hopefully to the increased cooperation of the literary among the student body, when the time comes to prepare the Winter Issue.

NATIONAL DEFENSE CHEMISTRY SUBJECT OF CLUB LECTURE

Dr. Wiselogle of Johns Hopkins Guest of Loyola Chemists; Draws Comparison of Chemistry Industry Today And In The Last War.

On Tuesday, October 28, Frederick Y. Wiselogle, Ph.D., of Johns Hopkins University, addressed the Chemist Club on "Organic Chemistry in National Defense". Speaking to one of the largest audiences that the Chemists' Club has enjoyed in some time, the dynamic and personable Dr. Wiselogle for a too short hour held the undivided attention of the Loyola students and their many guests.

The address was a timely comparison of our present chemical status with that enjoyed by our country in a previous crisis, World War I. In 1914, as Dr. Wiselogle pointed out, we were plentifully supplied with the same raw materials we find gratifyingly plentiful today; but when it came to processing chemicals, pharmaceuticals, and synthetic products with German patents we were desolate, famished unto near-death.

Barter Possible Then

"Since we were then a neutral, barter with Germany seemed a possible solution; in exchange for the precious chemical products we would give Germany our surplus of cotton, a staple she very much needed. But the English blockade produced a stalemate in these negotiations. In the few months that followed fantastic price rises made chemicals prohibitive, and in some cases unobtainable at any price."

"Two factors then came to the aid of the chemical industry in America. We entered the war, and improved ingenuity and research began to produce alternate methods and equivalent products. Our entrance into the war and the seizure of alien property freed a great number of German patents. Instead of selling these patents to a specified firm, the Wilson administration sold them on a lease basis to any American manufacturer capable of their production. This gave the initial impetus to an industry that was always important, and that now has grown to a magnitude commensurate with that importance."

No Famine Now

Today we face no famine such as threatened in 1914. Dr. Wiselogle stated, "Indeed the picture is quite rosy; nylon is a fine substitute for silk where silk must be replaced, and besides is doing many things silk was incapable of doing; our synthetic rubber is superior to natural rubber in all but low price, and yet the difference does not make its future production impossible. But there are dark patches in the picture too: a shortage of trained chemists; need of more nitrogen fixation plants, and minor shortages in the production of toluene."

"Such is the state of things in 1941, during this World War II. And American chemists give their answer to democracy's call by an all out 'War effort' the sooner to return to the old standard—Better things for better living,—through Chemistry."

Dr. Arnold Dresden To Deliver Lecture To Math Club

This evening, Friday, at 8:30 Dr. Arnold Dresden, director of mathematics at Swarthmore College, will lecture to the Math Club of Loyola and their guests on "Mathematics and Intuition". The lecture is to be followed by a social in the recreation room of the gymnasium.

Professor Dresden was born and educated in Holland, and came to the United States in 1903. After a brief association with the University of Chicago, Professor Dresden was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. From 1906 to 1927 he directed Mathematics at the University of Wisconsin, and in 1927 he began his duties as Mathematics director at Swarthmore College, where he has been ever since.

Society To Publish Pamphlet

In connection with such lectures as Dr. Dresden's, the Math Club will publish in the spring a summary pamphlet of all the activities of the club. The pamphlet will contain, besides the essays of the society's members, brief introductory messages from various members of the Loyola College faculty.

Any student desiring special instruction in Math may obtain it from the Math Club coaching class at Dr. Celaur's office after 12:40 P.M. on Thursdays or Fridays.

Fr. Delaney Opens Fall Lectures On Sunday, Nov. 16

(Continued from Page 1, Col. 3) problems are considered and answers are given, along with helpful suggestions. Fr. Delaney, who studied at the Gregorian University in Rome and was mentioned by William L. Shirer in his popular book, Berlin Diary, is indeed well qualified to speak on the chosen subject because of his association with the institute.

Social Welfare

His opening lecture, entitled "Social Welfare in a Democracy," will consider what democracy should do concerning the social welfare of its citizens as opposed, for instance, to what its duties are concerning the citizens' business welfare. The following week, he will speak on "Democratic Industry," bringing out how it differs from industry in the totalitarian state.

Is Democracy Workable?

On Sunday, Nov. 30, the title of his lecture will be "The Function of Democratic Government." He will attempt to answer, in this lecture, "Question—What Does the State Owe to the People?" The series will end on Dec. 7th with a talk on a most pertinent subject—"Is Democracy Workable?"

Previous Fall lecture series have proven very enjoyable and profitable to those who attended, and it is hoped that this year's series will again be well supported by the friends of Loyola.

Alumni Doings

By

FRANK J. AYD, JR., '42

Every graduate of Evergreen cherishes the memory of Father Fremgen. No one has forgotten the true Loyola spirit which he showed whenever the opportunity was given. While with us he wrote not one, but two school songs, and was the very life of the Glee Club.

Of all his activities, the one he enjoyed most and worked the hardest for was Loyola Night, for which he alone is really responsible. He, the man who conceived it, defined it as a night when students, alumni and friends may gather for pleasure and for a demonstration of school spirit. Within two weeks Loyola Night will again be held. It is the hope of the writer that the alumni will remember the purpose of the affair and be present in large numbers.

Alumni At Work

The fields that Loyola students enter after graduation are many and varied. For instance, Charles Conlon is now connected with a well known undertaking establishment. Charles Baumer is keeping himself busy at the Rustless Iron and Steel. Bob McLernan a former test tube terror, is now a metallurgist at the Bethlehem Steel Co. at Sparrows Point. Also connected with this corporation at the Key Highway Plant is William 'Jessie' Murphy. Quiet John Shattery has become a successful chemist to the pride of the College Chemistry Department. Tommy Stakem, former A.A. President, hasn't left athletics entirely, for Tommy is now running bowling alleys way up there, in Cumberland.

Alumni Still With Books

After graduation some stay at the books to really complete their education. For instance, Francis 'Bill' Burch accepted a fellowship from Yale University and is now there studying Law. Joe Connor, ex-Greyhound staff writer and authority on jazz, has, happily to say, returned to Loyola to study more Mathematics. Joe Schnaffner, the envy of the science students, is now industriously working at Johns Hopkins in chemistry. Bob McAllister is now numbered among the Jesuits and can be found at Wernersville, Penna.

Sympathy

On behalf of the GREYHOUND staff and the members of his class we send sympathies to Joe Coyne on the recent death of his father. Joe, as you know, was for three years the editor of this column.

Robert A. Meara Addresses Members Of Mendel Club

Discusses "Plant Pigments" At Second Meeting of Club

Last Wednesday, November 12, in the Biology Lecture room, Robert A. Meara, of the Junior class, addressed a meeting of the Mendel Club. As the second student speaker of the year he discussed the topic "Plant Pigments."

Constituents

In the course of his speech he dealt with the pigmental constituents of plants, such as chlorophyll, xanthophyll, and carotin. The theoretical chemistry involved in the formation of the pigments, their uses in medicine and as dyes in industries were related by Mr. Meara.

October 22nd, Mr. James D. Russell opened the year's program with a discussion on "The Wood Tick."

Jenkins Society Plans New Debating Season

Officers Elected For New Year As Freshmen Society Puls Plans Into Action.

After they had elected their officers for the year and had decided upon definite agenda, the members of the Jenkins Debating Society, Freshman debating group at Loyola, had no time in putting their plans into action.

Held Open Forum

At the first meeting after the election of officers, the Fresh Debaters discussed the pros and cons of the high school debate question of the year, Resolved: That every able bodied male citizen of the United States be required to have one year of full-time military training before attaining the present draft age.

There was a twofold reason for selecting this particular topic for the Society's first open forum. First of all, it presented a lively subject for discussion, and secondly, it served to clarify the question for those members who are scheduled to debate the topic formally in the near future.

Cut System Debated

At the conclusion of the forum, Mr. Davis, president of the organization, announced that the question, Resolved: That an unlimited system of cuts be adopted at Loyola, would be debated at the next meeting. The following Monday the Negative, upheld by Messrs. Mackey and Malz, was awarded the decision by a popular vote over the Affirmative team, comprised of Messrs. Baldwin and Humil. Mr. Baldwin was voted best speaker.

"Oregon" System Tried

In keeping with the policy of lending variety to the meetings, the Society presented a debate under the Oregon system at the next meeting. According to this system, the second member of each team cross-examines the first speaker for the opposition. Then the two cross-examiners deliver the rebuttals. The whole procedure was new to the majority of the members, but it was accorded an instant and enthusiastic welcome. The topic for debate was the high school question, that is, a universal draft before the age of twenty-one. The affirmative team, Messrs. Kennedy and Davis, was rendered the decision over Messrs. Henderson and Krejci of the negative. Mr. Davis was declared best speaker.

Debate at Blakefield

Last Monday afternoon, the Jenkins Debaters were the guests of the Bellarmine Debating Society of Loyola High School in a debate before the student body in the Library at Blakefield. The Freshmen, represented by two alumni of Loyola High, Malz and Baldwin, upheld the negative of the high school question against Burke and Conke, proponents of the affirmative for the High.

Non-Catholic students are not obliged to attend the retreat, but special lectures will be conducted for them. The final exercises will be held Wednesday morning, with Mass and Communion, followed by breakfast in the Gym. Thursday, November 20, being Thanksgiving, there will be no class, and this holiday will be extended over Friday also.

Saga of Jazz

THOMAS B. CONNOR, '42

In this brief account of the history of jazz music you may have noticed that I have mentioned little or nothing of the white musicians who contributed to the development of this new art form. They did not come into prominence until after 1920 when there suddenly arose in the mid-west a brilliant, young, white cornetist playing in the same hot style that was so characteristic of the Negroes. He was really the first white musician who openly adopted the style that Louis Armstrong and other well-known negroes were making famous at this time.

Began At Early Age

Leon "Bix" Beiderbecke was born in 1903 in Davenport, Iowa. At an early age he showed a strong liking for music and began tinkering with a cornet, learning to play the instrument solely by ear. We have been told that never in his short life did he actually take a lesson on the cornet. Bix soon learned to play well enough to join local bands. In 1921, in Chicago, "Bix" left school to devote all of his time to his real love—music. He soon became well-known around town and before long landed a job with the Wolverines, a band that eventually became one of the first great white jazz orchestras. This was the first real jazz group that Bix played with and together they turned out some noteworthy phonograph records.

Greatness Short-Lived

In 1925 the group disbanded and Bix was out of a steady job until he joined Jean Goldkette's orchestra in the middle of 1926. Scholom was given a chance to play what he wished with Goldkette, whose repertoire consisted mostly of the sweet commercial tunes of the day, so in 1927 he went with Paid Whiteman. It is most astonishing to think that this young genius reached such great heights with such a limited technical foundation. In 1930 due to impairments in his health, "Bix" was forced to leave the band for a rest cure. However this did not relieve his condition and on August 7, 1931 after a short spell of pneumonia the end came suddenly for the twenty-seven year old musician.

Style Original

Hughes Panassié tells us that "Bix never played in Negro style in the literal sense; but he played according to the real spirit of the negro style." We can see an indirect influence of Louis Armstrong, but taken as a whole, Bix's style possessed certain qualities which distinguished it from all others. It was filled with his own personality, and was characterized by a delightful intonation and exceptionally pure tone. His ideas in his improvisations were made with such perfect grace and in such orderly fashion that one might think that they had been written out beforehand. There seemed no limit to these ideas, and seldom, if ever, was he known to have repeated himself.

"Bix" Beiderbecke still lives with us today in the music that he loved so well. Together with Louis Armstrong he has been called a pioneer in the formation of the "Chicago style" of hot jazz. His influence on others has been greater than that of any other white musician, and he enjoys, like a number of great composers, that unique distinction of being one of the leaders in a new musical trend.

Your Career

REV. A. A. NORTH, S.J.

Pharmacy, "the science of preparing and preserving drugs and of compounding and dispensing medicine according to prescription", offers many diverse opportunities to the student of science. It is a profession, a business and an industry. The need for men in these fields is so great that pharmacy is one of the few professions allowed deferment.

A Business

As a business it is best exemplified by the American type drugstore, owned and operated by registered pharmacists who fill prescriptions, who are the community's custodian of drugs and narcotics, and who sell everything from pianos to flyswatters. For this work a knowledge of business accounting is necessary. Depending upon the size and location of his store as well as its relative importance as a prescriptive pharmacy, the pharmacist receives a salary between $50 and $75 a week.

Industry

Pharmacy is an industry which compounds drugs, prepares and experiments with and analyzes vaccines, drugs, and medicines for physicians and retail drugstores. Most of the men employed in this field have received a doctorate degree in some special field of pharmacy, such as pharmaceutical botany, the medicinal value of plants and herbs, and pharmaceutical chemistry, the medicinal action of various drugs and vaccines on the animal system. Their salaries range from $3000 to $5000 a year, and their work is mostly research.

Governmental Positions

The Civil Service employs a great number of pharmacists, both in research and in investigative work. The pharmacologist plans and conducts research upon the toxicological action of organic or inorganic substance by means of experimental animals. The pharmaceutical chemist employs research to discover new chemical derivatives for use in treatment of disease, and investigates alleged adulteration or misbranding of food and drugs in the commercial field. The Bureau of Drugs and Narcotics conducts investigations throughout the country to uncover the illicit traffic of drugs and narcotics, and attempts to destroy the dope rings. This type of work, though well paid, requires long and arduous hours, exposure to all kinds of weather, a great deal of traveling, personal contact with all classes of people, including the members of the underworld, and hence involves personal risk and dangers.

Qualifications

For any of the above positions, besides a degree in pharmacy from a recognized school of pharmacy, a license from the State is required. This is obtained by passing a State board examination. For most of the positions with the government, special studies in some particular field of pharmacy are required in addition to the college degree. Some of the subjects leading to a degree in pharmacy are: The theory and practice of pharmacy, general chemistry, organic and inorganic, qualitative, botany, biology, physiology, physics, business administration and others.

The pharmacist is an important member of the community he serves, and enjoys a professional standing in it.

Benchley Society Organizes Anew

Author Robert Benchley, Patron Saint of Club, Does Not Attend.

One of the rare meetings of the Robert E. Benchley Literary Society was held last week on the Washington Boulevard between Laurel and Hyattsville as the members, on roller skates, went hurdling over the culverts and billboards which line that stretch of the highway. As the members revolved, the discussion devolved to a debate on "The Problem of the Schatchen in the Niebelungenlied", with many and varied viewpoints being presented. At Hyattsville, the members enjoyed milkshakes and frankfurters at the local Hot-Shoppe, where one of the members insisted that G. Washington had slept in 1779.

Organized In 1939

The Society, which was organized in the Spring of 1939 by Messrs. P. Edward Kaltenbach and Charles E. Barrett, patrons of the arts, has, to a large extent, remained in acta primo proximo since its conception. This year, however, new interest was manifested in the works of "the master", as Dr. Benchley is affectionately referred to by society members, and in response to this popular demand, the founders felt themselves under a moral compulsion to effect a renaissance.

William Waters Elected Vice-President Of Capital Group.

Loyola's International Relations Club is more active in this third year of its existence than at any time in the past. Under the stimulus of world crises and history-shaping events, interest in international affairs has increased almost weekly.

The general membership has grown in size and spirit until, at the present time, it comprises a workable, vital body of well-informed young men, who are most valuable in the club's meetings, which are held on alternate Tuesdays. Topics for discussion are elected at the meetings, and volunteers are always on hand for the short background paper, which precedes the general discussion.

Affiliated with Carnegie

The International Relations Club is in active affiliation with the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace, and has placed reservations for a number of its members in the general meeting of colleges to be held at Lehigh University on November 28th. The club is also in conjunction with the Catholic Colleges International Relations Club, a nation-wide association, and more particularly with the Capital Division of that organization.

Waters Elected

At the initial meeting of the Capital group on November 1st, Loyola College was selected for the post of Vice-Presidency. William Waters, secretary of the organization, was elected to that capacity by the members of Loyola's Club.

Dr. Doehler extends a cordial welcome to all who are interested in this organization to attend the future meetings.

BOOK REVIEWS

P. EDWARD KALTENBACH, '42

Edna Ferber's latest work is a saga of the lusty, roaring 1880's when America was progressing by leaps and bounds, and the great financial wizards of the day were struggling for supremacy in a gigantic game of Monopoly. It paints a vivid, authentic picture of two centers of interest of that day—New Orleans, rich in the color and tradition of the Old World, and Saratoga, stronghold of the first families of America.

Like so many other novels, the story begins at the end and then unfolds the story in retrospect. The gentlemen of the press are found interviewing Clint Muroon, a fabulously wealthy financier, and his wife Clio on the occasion of the magnate's eighty-ninth birthday. Long regarded as the acme of solidity and respectability, the old gentleman is fed up with all the sham and hypocrisy, and tries to tell the press the true story of his checkered past. The unbelieving reporters humor him, and, as he tries to convince them, the thoughts of his wife drift back over the years, gradually unveiling the story to the readers.

After an absence of some fifteen years, Clio Dalaine returns to New Orleans as a young lady of twenty, determined to make the world her oyster. There she meets Clint Muroon, a cynical Texas adventurer who is embittered by crooked land-grabbers. The two decide to work together and they set out for Saratoga—Clio to hook a millionaire husband and Clint to earn a few honest dollars at the gaming tables. The ensuing pages tell how the two insinuate themselves into elite Saratoga society and give the writer an opportunity to infuse a great deal of background into the narrative. They end up by turning the place topsy-turvy, culturally.

conversationally and financially. Clio discovers that she really loves Clint, and prefers him, penniless though he is, to a stuffed-shirted millionaire. Not to let down the heroine, Clint matches wits with these financial geniuses and earns himself a million dollars, and they live happily ever after.

The story points a subtle moral, drawing an unfavorable comparison between the comparatively enlightened present and the rough and tumble 1880's when might made right. It is once or twice stated that those who grumble about capitalism and injustice should have lived then, when they would really have had something to grumble about. In substantiation of this, the story presents a lurid and uncomplimentary picture of the great financial figures of the day—Gould, Astor, Brady, Fiske, Vanderbilt.

On the whole the plot is well-constructed and well-executed, and makes interesting reading. The author has an amazing command of the English language, and knows how to use it to advantage. However it is unfortunate that the story begins in medias res, for the outcome of the tale is always known by the reader, and although such novels usually unravel in the conventional manner and usually fade out with the heroine in the arms of the hero, still there would have been a modicum of suspense while Clio is vacillating between Clint Muroon and Burt Van Sterd. Also like many another writer of her sex, the author takes fiendish delight in making her description complete in every detail, down to the number of seeds on the caraway rolls at dinner. This is especially noticeable and irritating in the minutely detailed account of the twenty or thirty changes of costume in which the heroine appears. At times these descriptions read like excerpts from McCall's, or a page from a Montgomery Ward catalogue.

every Englishman is determined to defeat the Axis, or die courageously in the attempt. He depicted London during the great fires, caused by incendiary bomb raids, and clearly described how, handicapped by lack of the necessary fire equipment, firemen and civilians stopped, by courage and resourcefulness, the rush of the inferno.

Tells of Sacrifices

Sir Philip strongly stated that the spirit of Britain is not only a spirit of fight, but also one of sacrifice. "The English people willingly accept the meagre rations of food and clothes allotted to them, realizing that only by personal sacrifice can this war be won. No longer in England does there exist the rigid system of class distinction."

JIM McMANUS

CORRECTION, PLEASE

Far be it from Ye Sports Editor to hand out advice, but what we are about to say is strictly the Voice of Experience, and may be well to remember. If you should ever, by some quirk of fate, be thrown into the authorship of a column, never, never, never write one in a hurry. Take it from us, we know.

Last issue, in the heat of a speedily finished column, we referred to the soccer squad as "Loyola's ONLY fall sports squad." Shortly after, while walking along the path, we were alarmed to perceive what looked like a Kansas twister wildly careening in our direction. However, when the twister came within three inches of our nose and barked, "Under what classification do you place the cross-country team, debating or dramatics?", we recognized the usually placid face of our new track coach distorted with just and outraged wrath. Needless to say, we were speechless.

After three weeks, we still can think of no satisfactory excuse, and so, with all the dignity befitting our position, let us close the incident by saying: THE GREYHOUND regrets the error.

COURTSTERS WEAKENED

A distinct blow to the early season hopes of Loyola's ambitious basketball team was felt recently when Franny McDonough, regular guard on last year's squad, was taken to the hospital and operated on for appendicitis. Mac had been troubled with chronic appendicitis for some time and was advised to have the appendix removed before it caused him more trouble.

However, McDonough will not be out permanently. Present indications are that he will be back in the line-up shortly after the Christmas holidays. This will make him available for the majority of the schedule, but his absence for the Villanova, Wake Forest and Morris-Harvey games will be a distinct handicap. Mac is a steady, heady player, and although he is not particularly outstanding on the offense, his defensive work alone stamps him as an asset to any team.

Everything considered, the prospects for this season are not as strong as they were last year. In planning for the campaign, "Lefty" will have to count on the speedy development of several inexperienced men. To get them in shape in time for the Villanova game, which is definitely one of the toughest, will be quite a task. However, the Coach has developed players in the past with almost uncanny speed, and may be able to turn the trick again.

Two outstanding tributes to "Lefty's" ability to develop talent are Bernie Thobe, the team's high scorer for two years, and Jim Nouss, rangy center, who is probably the most improved member of the squad this season. If Reitz can train two or three able substitutes in time for the season's opener, Loyola will be a factor to reckon with in Eastern basketball this campaign.

By the time the next issue comes out, the Towson game will have been played. Three nights after the curtain-raiser Villanova will be met. The amount of support which the students give the team can easily be a major factor in their chances. Take the hint, fellows, and come out in force for the season's first game.

Greyhound Harriers Ready For Hopkins

Cross Country Squad Led By Captain Tom McCall.

After several futile attempts in the past, Loyola will definitely be represented this fall by a cross-country team. The much-needed organization of the squad has been brought about by the diligent efforts of Mr. James E. Gallico, S.J., a former Fordham University star, and though only one dual meet has been scheduled for this year, a bright future is in prospect for this new addition to the athletic curriculum.

Abbreviated Schedule

The harriers meet Johns Hopkins University on the Homewood course today, and on November 29th, two weeks from tomorrow, the outfit will travel to Washington to participate in the Mason-Dixon Conference meet at Catholic University.

Tom McCall will captain the Green and Gray this fall.

Matmen Shaping Up Fast In Training Campaign

Coach Mike Ventura Driving Squad Hard; Planning Pre-Season Matches.

Reinforced with a year's experience, the wrestling team, under the tutelage of Coach Mike Ventura, is looking forward to a banner season. The squad looks to be particularly strong in the lighter weights, but the one real problem is to find a heavyweight to take the place of Gabe Foggi, of last year's graduating class.

In Good Shape

The team will certainly be in condition come what may, for Coach Ventura has been putting them through the paces for the last three weeks and plans to have several practice meets with high school teams before the season gets underway. This fact, however, should not discourage newcomers from reporting, for all added talent is deeply appreciated.

Team Lining Up

According to the outlook at the present time the team will stack up something like this. Bachman will likely handle the 121 lb. class, unless Ventura himself gets down to that weight. Either Ventura or Malooly will handle the 128 lb. duties, with O'Hare in the 135 lb. class. By far the majority of candidates line up in the 145 lb. bracket, in which Weytowitz will probably get the call due to his experience. Jack will be ably backed by Huppman, Geraghty, Anderson, Galvin, Chase and Sivinski. One of the Smith's will step up in the 165 class, while in the 175 and heavy bracket it looks like Lucchesi and Becker.

Meets Booked

So far meets have been arranged with Gallaudet (H), Hopkins (H), Maryland (A) and Hopkins (A), with several more on the fire.

Barrett Announces Tentative Fencing Schedule For Inexperienced But Talented Aggregation

Captain Chas. E. Barrett announced yesterday that the fencing team will open its 1941-42 schedule with a match against the Alumni December 5. Having organized several months ago, the team appears in good shape already, and gives promise of coming off on top in the majority of its meets.

TERPS SCORE CLINCHER IN LAST FOUR MINUTES

Main, Maryland Forward, Tallies Only Goal Scored On Pazourek By State Opponent All Year To Carry Off 1-0 Decision; 'Terps Need Only Hopkins, W.-Md. Wins For Title.

After battling a heavily favored University of Maryland team to a scoreless deadlock for well over three periods, the Loyola soccer team bowed in defeat for the first and only time this season. With but four minutes of play remaining in the tilt, Main, of the Teraps, booted one past Ed Pazourek, stellar goalkeeper of the Greyhounds, for the only marker of the entire game.

State Championship

It was the only time that Pazourek had been scored upon by a state team this season, and it stamps Maryland as a heavy favorite to cop the mythical state championship. With only Hopkins and Western Maryland, both of whom were defeated by the Green and Gray, remaining on their schedule, the Old Liners are almost a sure thing to walk off with the 1941 laurels. By virtue of its victories over every other team in the state with the exception of the Naval Academy, which appeared on only Maryland's schedule, Loyola is assured of the runner-up spot.

Successful Season

No one can doubt that the Greyhounds did more than was expected of them. Although an experienced team returned to school in September, with a none too good record in 1940, there was not much optimism in the ranks. However, when Towson Teachers, usually able to produce a better-than-average team, was vanquished twice by identical scores of 3 to 0, Loyola supporters knew that their eleven was not to be taken lightly this year. During the course of the season, Western Maryland, Hopkins and Frostburg fell before a crushing attack and found themselves unable to penetrate a stout defense. Only Virginia, after spotting the Evergreen booters a 4 to 0 lout, was able to score on the Green and Gray, but even then, Loyola pulled away to a convincing 7-3 triumph. Finally, came the Maryland game and with it the lone black mark against an otherwise perfect record.

Newcomers Star On Attack

Even though the present season is concluded, the Greyhounds may look forward to next year with a gleam of hope in their eyes. Spearheading the attack was Joe Repetti, freshman from Calvert Hall, who scored seven of Loyola's twenty goals. He was followed in the scoring parade by two of his classmates, Babe Schwalenberg (five) and Bill Schoeberlein (three). The whole forward wall of the squad will return to action next year, and lost by graduation will be only Vic Bock and Frank Price, the mainstays of the powerful defense. Pazourek, Harry Chase, Len Lewandowski, Tony DiNoto, Frank Rostkowski, Barney Goldberg, Izzy Trovato, Eric Steingass, Mark Jenkins, and Dave Manrodt will again be in action in 1942.

BASKETBALL SQUAD PREPS FOR HEAVY DECEMBER SCHEDULE

The time for the start of another hectic basketball season at Loyola draws nearer every day. Less than three weeks remain before the opening game with Towson, and once the campaign gets under way, there will be little let-up for the Greyhound basketeers. Three days after the Towson game, Loyola will travel to Philadelphia to engage Villanova's powerful Wildcats, who, although slightly weakened by the loss of Art Spector, lanky center man, will still put on the court one of the East's most powerful arrays. Al Severance, wily Wildcat coach, is noted for his stress on detail, and it is a safe bet that Villanova will be in perfect shape for the early season game. The Wildcats have been holding practice since early October.

December Schedule Tough

Returning to the home court, "Lefty's" protégés must face such opposition as Wake Forest and Morris Harvey before the Christmas holidays. Those who saw the Wake Forest game last season are still recovering from the tension of that two extra period battle, which finally went to the Dencons by a one-point margin. Indications point to a repetition of that struggle this year, for both teams appear to be about equal in all around strength. Morris Harvey, whom Loyola defeated last year by means of a second-half rally, will be no set-up. Joe Daher, Golden Eagle mentor, picked up quite a few pointers during last year's visit and will have plenty of surprises in store for the Green and Gray.

Two Regulars Return

To face this barrage of early season headaches, Coach Lefty Reitz will have a team which features only two regulars from last season's powerful squad. Bernie Thobe and Barney Goldberg, stellar forwards, are the returning regulars. The remainder of the first team will probably be composed of Jim Nouss, center, and Franny Bock and Ed Pazourek, guards. All three of these were substitutes last year and saw plenty of action. Reserves from last year's team will include Frank Price and Charlie McCollum. Of the new crop of candidates, Nat Glushakow, Izzy Trovato, Larry Knox and Bill Schoeberlein look like strong candidates for reserve roles.

Mr. John Hack was elected chairman for the next meeting, when a round-table discussion on Politics is to take place.

McELROY NOW SHOOTING FOR THE EVERGREEN

Ye Editor Barrett Holds Issue Will Be Placed With The Classics.

The Evergreen, the year book of '42, goes dauntlessly on.

We went over the other day to see "Stew" McElroy about his portion of the drudgery. The effects of the Barn Dance hadn't worn off yet and in answer to a question, he replied, "Yep Zeke! Got some of the finest shots of my life over in Gym Hallwe'en night, hanging by my feet from a light." This shows to what extremes "Stew" will go to get a good shot for the Evergreen. "No," he went on in answer to another question, "the straw didn't bother me much . . . it was the corn." Sensing a reflection on the band of a famous Senior, we took a few quick glances at his shots of the campus, the Frosh Welcoming Dance, and other pictures he has taken, thanked him profusely and left.

Ye Editor Speaks

We descended immediately to the iniquitous den of THE GREYHOUND, where we found "Chuck" Barrett, editor of the Evergreen. We asked for it. "This year's book," he said in reply, "will surpass anything ever printed along this line. It's about time that a really great year book was added to the world's collection of belles-lettres, and ours will be the one. In future years students will study Homer's Iliad, Virgil's Aeneid, Peter Arno's New Yorker, and the Class of '42's Evergreen." With this, he began to rant and rave, sometimes in English, sometimes in Latin and again in his native Hindustani. He tore his hair and beat upon his breast as he expounded his plans, told of new techniques, and shot so much stuff generally that we deemed discretion the better part of valor and, thanking him, quickly slammed the door behind us.

DRAMATIC SOCIETY TO PRESENT PLAYS

Masque and Rapier Group At Work On Comedy And O'Neill Drama.

In preparation for Loyola Night, Nov. 27, the Masque and Rapier Society of Loyola College, under the direction of Mr. John Henry Lawton, is producing two one-act plays. The first of the two plays, Eugene O'Neill's psychological drama In The Zone, has for its setting the hold of a ship. Its whole plot revolves about the characters of a group of seamen who find themselves under the intense strain of war.

The other play, quite opposite to O'Neill's play, is a farce by John Kirkpatrick. Entitled A Wedding, it deals with all the pre-wedding excitement that contributes to a bridegroom's ordeal, plus a search for a lost collar button.

Fr. Grady Speaks In Preview Over WCBM

Reviews Early Incidents In Journalistic Career Of Sir Philip Gibbs.

On Monday, Nov. 3, from 5:00 to 5:15 P.M. Father Richard Grady, S.J., previewed over station WCBM the coming lecture of Philip Gibbs. He began his program with a brief dramatization of an early phase in the journalistic career of the British author, in which Sir Philip was characterized by his passion for accuracy and his desire for facts.

Father Grady continued his program with a well delivered talk tracing the background of Sir Philip as both writer and peace worker. In connection with the lecture on Nov. 9, whose proceeds were donated to the Loyola Scholarship Fund, he also discussed briefly the importance of the small American College and the benefits of a liberal education.

ACCOUNTING ACADEMY HOLDS FIRST LECTURE

Talk Delivered By Noted Baltimore Accountant; Social Follows.

The Academy of Accounting and Commerce held its initial lecture-social of the season last Friday night, having as guest speaker Mr. Edwin J. Stegman, C.P.A.

Mr. Stegman, who is chairman of the Board of Examiners of the Association of Certified Public Accountants, spoke for approximately one hour on "Accounting as a Career," outlining briefly the history of the young profession, explaining the nature of the C.P.A. examinations, and indicating the compensation to be expected in the three classes of accountants; junior, semi-senior, and senior.

After the lecture and brief question period, the audience of about fifty club members and their dates adjourned to the recreation room in the gym, where canned music and canned punch, with occasional respite for billiards and table tennis, was partaken by all in an air of typical Loyola camaraderie.

SPEAKERS BUREAU NOW ACTIVELY ORGANIZED

D. Schmidt, B. Goldberg New Officers; Plan For Busy Schedule.

The Public Speakers Bureau underwent a complete reorganization this year in which there was a change of officers, a revision of the subjects on which it will speak, and an increase in membership. Plans have been made for much more activity per month this year than was had during its one month of existence last year.

New Officers

In the election held last September, the single office of chairman of last Spring was replaced by two; a chairman, Don Schmidt, and a secretary, Bernard Goldberg.

Busy Schedule

Scheduled this season, are Seton High School, the Institute of Notre Dame, Trinity College, and the Newman Club of the University of Delaware.

Yesterday, Thursday, November 13, the Theatre group initiated the year's program with a visit to Mount St. Agnes College.
